Expert Reviews:

Edmunds.com: The enlarged backseat makes it a more compelling family vehicle, with plenty of legroom and a reclining seatback that make road trips friendlier for those riding in the back.

newCarTestDrive.com: on the highway, the Outback becomes something more like a station wagon than an SUV. It corners more precisely with less body roll, and it rides at least as comfortably as other crossover vehicles we have driven

KBB.com: we comfortably fit three six-foot-tall adults in the back seat and still had space between their knees and the front seat backs. Wider front seats and a reclining rear seat further improve occupant comfort

ConsumerReports.org: Chest-level side air bags protect front occupants and head-protecting curtain air bags cover both front and rear outboard positions. The front air bag for the right front seat won't deploy if a child-sized person is sitting there
